At the Globe Laboratories in Fort Worth, which serve every state in the nation as well as many foreign countries, some 260 biological and pharmaceutical products in quantities sufficient to treat 70,000,000 fowl and animals are produced annually. And the staff of 200 finds Lone Star Gas an invaluable ally in securing precision at every step in processing.

Gas generated steam is used in the sterilization of all instruments and equipment, pasteurization, cooking and sterilization of culture media, and in the processing of animal residue into tankage and industrial greases. Direct gas heat is used in sterilizing inoculat-

Whether for the exacting processes in a laboratory or in the quantity production of war planes, Gas is the superior source of heat. Let a Lone Star Industrial Engineer study your industrial heating requirements. From his wide experience he will make sound, economical recommendations.

Natural gas is produced in every principal region of Texas. Experts estimate known reserves sufficient for several generations. First produced in Texas at Corsicana, natural gas has since 1901 developed into one of the state's major resources. It has brought wealth to the state in direct proportion to the development and expansion of markets for its use.

Develop NATIONAL MARKETS

INDUSTRIES located in the densely populated areas of the North and East aren't satisfied with doing a local or sectional business. They go after and get national markets. Why should Texas Industries confine their business to local and sectional markets? Why shouldn't more Texas Industries develop national markets, like industries in the North and East are doing, like some Texas Industries have already done? We have the fuel, transportation, raw materials, capital, brains and workers to do it. Will we accept the challenge and take advantage of our opportunity?

In spite of the fact that there are nearly one hundred companies writing Workmen's Compensation Insurance in Texas, the Texas Employers' Insurance Association writes about one-fifth of the total amount written. The Association's premium income amounted to nearly seven million dollars last year.

The Choice of Two Evils

THE action of Congress in appropriating funds for the Fair Employment Practices Committee for the 1945-46 fiscal year came as a severe blow to many thoughtful critics of this pernicious agency, particularly since the events immediately preceding the denouement encouraged many to believe that the agency would be deprived of further Federal funds and thus left to die on the vine of bureaucracy. The opposition of Southern Congressmen had been so alert and effective during the preceding weeks that the anticlimactic manner in which the bill eventually passed, without a peep of protest from the Southern members, caused many of their constituents to wonder at the apparent collapse of the opposition. Only sixteen Senators were on the floor, for instance, when the bill finally passed by a monotonous voice vote, and any one of them could have made a point of no quorum and otherwise delayed the bill for an indefinite period.

When all the facts are examined, however, particularly in relation to the political situation, it will be evident that the outcome doubtless represented a victory for FEPC opponents. In the first place, it should be borne in mind that the present FEPC is an agency created by executive order, without adequate legal authority to enforce its decisions; and furthermore the $250,000 appropriation granted it for 1945-46 is only half the amount it received during 1944-45, and is likewise only half the amount it sought for the current fiscal year. Consequently, its operations have been curtailed considerably, even though it will continue to function.

The question immediately comes to mind, of course, that if the FEPC is in fact an undesirable agency, and if the Southern bloc was in political control at the moment, then why was not complete victory achieved by denying it funds altogether? It is probable that FEPC opponents could indeed have achieved such a victory; but there is sound reason to believe that it would have been a pyrrhic victory, with more to be lost in the long run than what was momentarily lost through compromise.

It must be recalled, to begin with, that the bill in question would not have made mandatory the abolition of the agency. It was a war agencies appropriations bill, involving many millions of dollars for numerous Government agencies, and the most that could have been accomplished would have been to deprive the FEPC of Federal funds. Inasmuch as the present FEPC is an agency created not by legislative act but by executive order, it is the view of competent authorities that it could have continued to operate through private contributions, and that it might have prospered more from its martyrdom at the hands of Congress than it would have through nominal appropriations provided by Congress. Furthermore, it is generally believed that, even if Congress had denied the agency further funds, the President could not have afforded to abolish it by executive order. The political consequences in the pivotal States commanding large electoral votes would have been too serious.

The most important reason why the Southerners were compelled to compromise, however, was the danger of stimulating further FEPC strength through continued resistance. Bills are pending on the calendars of both Houses providing for a permanent FEPC of far greater scope and authority than that which the present agency can exercise. The House bill has thus far been bottled up in the powerful rules committee by a slim majority produced by a coalition managed by Southern Democrats. The rules committee is the agency of the House which customarily controls access to the floor of pending bills, and the only method of bypassing the committee which is available to FEPC supporters is the cir-ulation of a petition requiring the signatures of a majority of the members of the House. As soon as the necessary 218 signatures are obtained, the rules committee is discharged from consideration of the bill and a vote of the House then becomes automatic.

Sponsors of the permanent FEPC bill have thus far been unable to secure the necessary number of signatures, but this does not mean that a majority of the House would not vote for the bill if the opportunity were provided. It is generally conceded that whenever the bill comes to the floor it will pass. There are many members of the House, however, who would be compelled by political considerations to vote for the bill, but who can avoid, at least for the time being, signing the petition to bring the bill to a vote. They can continue in this anomalous role only so long as the political situation permits. It was primarily the danger of creating an untenable situation for this group which compelled the Southerners to abandon a last-ditch fight against the temporary FEPC in the recent appropriations bill.

The Southerners had managed, through legislative legerdemain in the House and a "talkathon" in the Senate, to block FEPC appropriations; and they might have succeeded in doing so indefinitely. But such tactics were having the simultaneous effect of holding up appropriations for many essential agencies of the Government, and each passing day produced greater dissatisfaction among many members of Congress who were anxious to complete the legislative program and recess for the remainder of the summer. Opponents of the FEPC appropriation were therefore confronted with the probability that if they forced the financial death warrant of the temporary agency they would coincidentally imperil their position with respect to the permanent FEPC bill. Either the rules committee might have been compelled to send the bill to the floor, or many members of Congress might have been forced to sign the petition to bring it to a vote. In either case, the bill would have come to a vote and probably passed.

Furthermore, on the Senate side there is no real security in a filibuster, particularly in regard to a bill of this kind. While unlimited debate is usually the rule, the Senate can at any time impose cloture, which means that by a two-thirds vote it can abruptly limit debate. The Senate rarely employs this device, but it nevertheless exists, and more than one EIGHTY industrialists in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, related to the manufacture of materiel of war, were just another bunch of G.I. Joes last month.

Wearing borrowed fatigues and liner helmets, they fell in and fell out all over Camp Hood, but whether in or out they learned a lot about the use the Army is making of the equipment and ordnance pieces made by their plants.

"Drafted" with Greetings from the President, the business men were ordered to report for "induction" at the Baker Hotel, where they piled into buses for the trip to Camp Hood. The draft notice was the regular form but the summons came not from the President of the United States but the president, Dewey D. Day, of the new Lone Star Post, Army Ordnance Association.

The industrialists were "soldiers for a day" at the invitation of the Industrial Service Section, Labor Branch of the Eighth Service Command. The occasion was the formal inauguration of the Lone Star Post as the thirty-first in the nation.

Going through the routine of a G.I. at the big camp, the men who make ordnance learned much from the men who use it, by witnessing the behavior of the weapons under actual training conditions.

Undergoing some of the basic training that is the lot of every buck private, the industrialists got a taste of G.I. life. They bunked in Army barracks; ate regular mess; answered first call at 5:45 a. m.; learned first-hand about "policing up"; bounced across the country in M-18 (Hellcat) tank destroyers; fired carbines on the target range; and observed an "attack" as two platoons worked out a routine training problem in the Infantry Replacement Training Center.

Host to the business men was Colonel B. F. Delameter, commanding officer of Camp Hood. En route to the camp, the group stopped at the Bluebonnet Ordnance Plant at McGregor, where the men were guests of the commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Charles W. Walker, and the general manager, L. R. Sanderson. They toured the bomb-loading lines.

BRIEFING. At the huge tank destroyer camp, the industrialists caught on quickly to the Army's way of doing things.

"DAILY DOZEN." Doing their "daily dozen" the Army way are Industrialists L. R. Ward, M. W. Barrett and Ralph McCann, out of cadence; and D. L. Johnson, stretch and bend.

CHOW. Eating K-rations in the field was the noon meal of the "soldiers for a day."

which followed the retreat ceremony, was the formal inauguration of the Lone Star Post. The charter was presented by Col. Clyde H. Morgan, St. Louis Ordnance District commanding officer, to President Day.

RIDING THE HELLCAT. Don F. Mitchell, Dallas; D. T. Harbison, S. P. Homer, W. M. Harrison, all of Fort Worth, and J. W. Behle, Dallas, pose for this picture before riding the M-39, personnel carrier, which is the same as the M-18 "Hellcat" without the mounted 77mm gun.

ON THE TARGET RANGE. Dewey D. Day and A. J. Armstrong, both of Dallas, examine the carbine before firing the weapon.

RETREAT. The Dallas industrialists render the salute while standing retreat at Camp Hood.

Dallas' First Open Golf Championship To Attract Nation's Top-Flight Players

DALLAS' greatest golf show in history, an event that merits this city's whole-hearted support under its present organizational set-up, will be staged over the Dallas Country Club course September 6 through September 9.

The long desired outstanding sports attraction that would bear this city's name and focus the national or international spotlight on our metropolis becomes a reality with the first Dallas Open championship. It will attract the greatest competitors in the game and it will equal in value of prize distribution the richest tournament ever staged in the Southwest. Awards, to be made in War Bonds, will total $13,333.33, maturity value.

Sponsor of this outstanding classic will be a large group of live-wire young business men who have behind them a long record of successful promotions. They are the members of the Dallas Salesmanship Club. Their purpose is twofold. Besides bringing to this city a wholesome sports attraction that will give the citizens the opportunity to see in major competition the top performers in one of our most popular games, the event will serve the admirable purpose of helping to sustain a most worthy local charity, the Salesmanship Club's recreation camp for underprivileged children. All profits will go to this permanent endowment fund. In the light of present plans for a vast post-war expansion in this program, including the establishment of new and more spacious facilities that will enable several thousand youngsters to enjoy the benefits of healthful summer camp outings that they would be denied but for this organization, the cause ranks very high on the list of worthy local projects.

The golf tournament itself will be a seventy-two hole stroke play competition under full sanction of the Professional Golfers' Association of America. Through the cooperation of this organization, assurance has been given that practically all of the top-flight tournament players now on the active list will be present to fire at the big War Bond prizes. Heading the list, of course, will be at least two native sons, the record-shattering Byron Nelson and Lt. Ben Hogan. Other prospective entries include Craig Wood, the duration National Open champion; and Sammy Byrd, Vic Ghezzi, Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Tony Penna, Sammy Snead and a galaxy of others.

The Dallas tournament will mark their only appearance in the Southwest during the remainder of this year and will break their jump from the middle west to the Pacific Coast and the rich chain of competitions scheduled from Portland to Los Angeles during the winter months.

The Dallas Country Club course is being toughened up prior to the tournament for the purpose of making scoring as difficult as possible and assuring citizens in the galleries that they will witness the best shots in golf by the stars who finish the four-day scramble in the list of prize winners. Only one round of eighteen holes will be played each day. The starting field will be limited to 110, of whom no more than fifty will be amateurs, who will be permitted to enter only by invitation after they have proven their mettle in qualifying rounds to be conducted August 18 and 19 at golf clubs throughout the state. When the big show gets under way, no players will tee off earlier than 10:30 a.m. and, under present plans, the last group away from the starting tee should leave not later than 3 p.m. This policy has been adopted for the convenience of the fans who will be permitted under this schedule plan to follow any stars in the field without necessity of getting to the course too early and without fear of being detained there too late in the day.

An added attraction to be staged in connection with the tournament is a celebrity dinner, which will be a ranch-style stag barbecue outdoors on the Walnut Hill Lane estate of C. Andrade, III, the night of September 6. In addition to the top figures in the golf world, who will be in Dallas for the tournament, it is hoped to have in attendance at this party a number of outstanding figures in the realms of screen, radio and sports, including Bing Crosby, Bop Hope, Grantland Rice and others. This party has been scheduled for coverage by photographers for Life Magazine.

Receipts from the celebrity dinner, to which a restricted number of tickets will be sold at $20 each, are expected to defray the actual expenses of the tournament, leaving all gallery fees to the actual competition and concession profits for the Salesmanship Club's charity. Celebrity dinner tickets also will admit purchasers to all four days of the tournament and extend to them club house privileges.

Committees announced by President Pat Greenwood of the Salesmanship Club to handle the many details of this first annual promotion follow:

George P. Macatee, Jr., honorary chairman; Hal A. Gullede, general chairman; John C. Jester, entries; Leonard Green, ticket sales; George W. White, publicity; Felix R. McKnight, grounds and greens; J. M. Moroney, hotels; Charles Pierce and R. B. Cullum, house and lockers; W. R. Mackenzie, rules; Frank C. Jones, scoring and scoreboard; Chester Cole, telephone and telegraph; John McFadden, marshalling; Herbert Chandler, public address system; Julius Schepps, concessions; C. A. Tatum and Harry Guy, program advertising; L. L. Hotchkiss, program sales; S. Y. Guthrie and Harlan Ray, entertainment; W. E. Mitchell and Alphonso Ragland, Jr., policing and parking; Inge Grant, caddies; A. L. Exline, starter; Joe Neuhoff, celebrity dinner; and Hugh M. Frye, auditing.

The advisory committee consists of John C. Jester, Charles L. Dexter, L. R. Munger, Robert H. Nix, F. M. Highfill, A. P. Simons, Dr. Brandon Carrell, R. T. Behannon and George P. Macatee. On the executive committee are George Young, John Higginbotham, Pat Greenwood, Sy Guthrie, Felix R. McKnight, A. L. Exline and Hal A. Gullede.

PHIL TERK has been named division manager at Dallas for Brown-Forman Distillers' Corporation in charge of Southern and Southwestern open states.

A. W. (MAC) WILLIAMS, who has been honorably discharged from the Army Air Forces after thirty months of service, has returned to the Dallas No. 1 store of Western Auto Supply Stores as manager.

The moving force behind Theater '45 is Margo Jones, a young woman of distinguished attainment in the professional theater, who will be its managing director. Miss Jones is fresh from a Broadway triumph as co-director with Eddie Dowling of the play, "The Glass Menagerie," which won the New York Drama Critics' company, and the scores of scripts received from new and established playwrights wanting to have their work receive first production in the Dallas playhouse. Theater '45 may well become a proving ground for Broadway and Hollywood in their never ending search for dramatic material.

What Others Say—

"Margo Jones, co-director of Broadway's 'The Glass Menagerie,' has bought a ticket for Dallas, where she is founding a new theater . . . in the booming Texas drama citadel."—Robert Coleman, Dramatic Critic, New York Daily Mirror.

"The Dallas theater . . . will play every night of the year. Wake up, Cook County (Chicago)!"—Claudia Cassidy, Dramatic Critic, Chicago Tribune.

"A permanent repertory theater, such as the one planned for Dallas, is what we've all dreamed for, hoped for and fought for."—Katharine Cornell, "First lady" of the American stage.

"The Broadway professional theater is intensely interested in the Dallas project. It may provide the model for post-war theatrical development throughout the country."—Jo Mielziner, Broadway scenic designer.

"The masses will come to the Theater to get away from their routine lives and, for a few hours at least, forget themselves and their problems."—Douglas Hawley, Dallas Times-Herald.

DALLAS' prestige as the acknowledged entertainment and cultural center of the Southwest is being signally enhanced this summer by national publicity concerning Dallas' newest theatrical venture—Theater '45, known earlier as Dallas Theater, Inc.

Many metropolitan newspapers have chronicled its establishment and Broadway has displayed keen interest in its development. Among others, the New York Times requested two lengthy articles about the enterprise. The box on this page quotes articles already published.

Theater '45 will open this fall with a full-time company of professional actors and technicians, presenting new plays and the classics in repertory, playing every night of the year, at modest prices.

Its organization is setting a precedent in America. Several cities, such as Washington, D. C., and San Francisco, are in process of developing similar resident theaters, but Dallas has taken the lead and has the enviable opportunity now to blaze the trail.

The theater will be housed in the Globe, at Fair Park, which will be completely remodeled and decorated by Jo Mielziner, renowned Broadway scenic designer, already known to Dallas for his conversion of Fair Park Auditorium into the Pan-American Casino in 1937. Mr. Mielziner's belief in the value of Theater '45 to the entertainment world is so great that he is coming to Dallas for only a fraction of his usual fee for such service.

Theater '45 will bring to Dallas the best in the type of dramatic entertainment that thousands of Southwesterners go to New York annually to see.

The enthusiasm with which professional theater workers have greeted the Dallas plan is reflected by the scores of applications from actors in New York and elsewhere who are eager to join the

STARLIGHT OPERETTA

By Ervin Eatenson

WITH the 1945 Starlight Operetta season well passed the half-way point, three more shows in August will complete the exceptionally well-rounded sino management. Marguerite Piazza, gifted South American singer, will be Queen Anne to Harold Patrick's D'Artagnan. Dorothy Sandlin will also be heard in this operetta. The large cast for Three Musketeers will also include George Lip-ton, Melton Moore, Frank Hornaday, Jack Sheehan, A. J. Herbert, Charles Yeardsley, Joseph Macaulay and Fred-eric Persson.

Third ballerina of the season will be presented in Maytime and Musketeers. She will be Miss Jeanne Devereaux, noted artist of the dancing world, who has been acclaimed the high priestess of pirouette.

Sets for the operettas have been elegantly designed and executed by the ace scenic artist, Carl Koeck, who was formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Asso-ciation. With a number of unique routines

Dallas District to Spend $12,500,000 On Highway Work First Post-War Year

THE post-war highway construction program now taking definite shape contemplates an expenditure during the first post-war year of at least $12,490,400 on road improvements in Dallas district No. 18 of the Texas Highway Department, it has been announced by R. D. Suddarth, chairman of the highway committee of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce.

Projects approved for construction during the first year after V-J Day and those under consideration for construction, for which plans are virtually complete, call for 123.4 miles of highway improvements in the seven-county district coming under the jurisdiction of T. E. Huffman, district engineer.

The approved list reflects a total estimated cost of $6,515,900, representing proposed improvements for 103.5 miles. The group of projects under consideration during the first post-war year will cost an estimated $5,974,500 and include proposed improvements on 19.9 miles. These two groups of projects are those on either the Federal Aid Primary or the State Highway Secondary System, and do not include any projects on the Farm to Market System.

Mr. Suddarth pointed out that there have been allotted, however, to the counties of highway district No. 18 approximately 350 miles of farm to market roads. It is estimated that these market roads will cost about $10,000 a mile, calling for an expenditure of approximately $3,500,000 over a three-year period.

Mr. Suddarth also explained that the $12,490,400 of projects do not include the interregional highways through Dallas (U. S. 67, 80 and 77), for which routings through the city are still indefinite, nor other projects which may be added to the three-year program.

The map on the adjoining page indicates the proposed highway projects for the first post-war year in the Dallas district, which comprises the counties of Dallas, Denton, Collin, Rockwall, Kaufman, Ellis, and Navarro. The heavy line through Dallas reveals the route of Central Boulevard (U. S. 75).

The biggest construction program ever undertaken during any one year in the past history of District No. 18 added up to about $2,500,000, reminded Mr. Huffman in citing the important part the district's post-war program will play in accelerating reemployment of veterans after the war.

"Through the haze of post-war uncertainties shines one comforting fact; there will be plenty of work for all former employees of the highway department now in service as well as those who are now on the job," Mr. Huffman said.

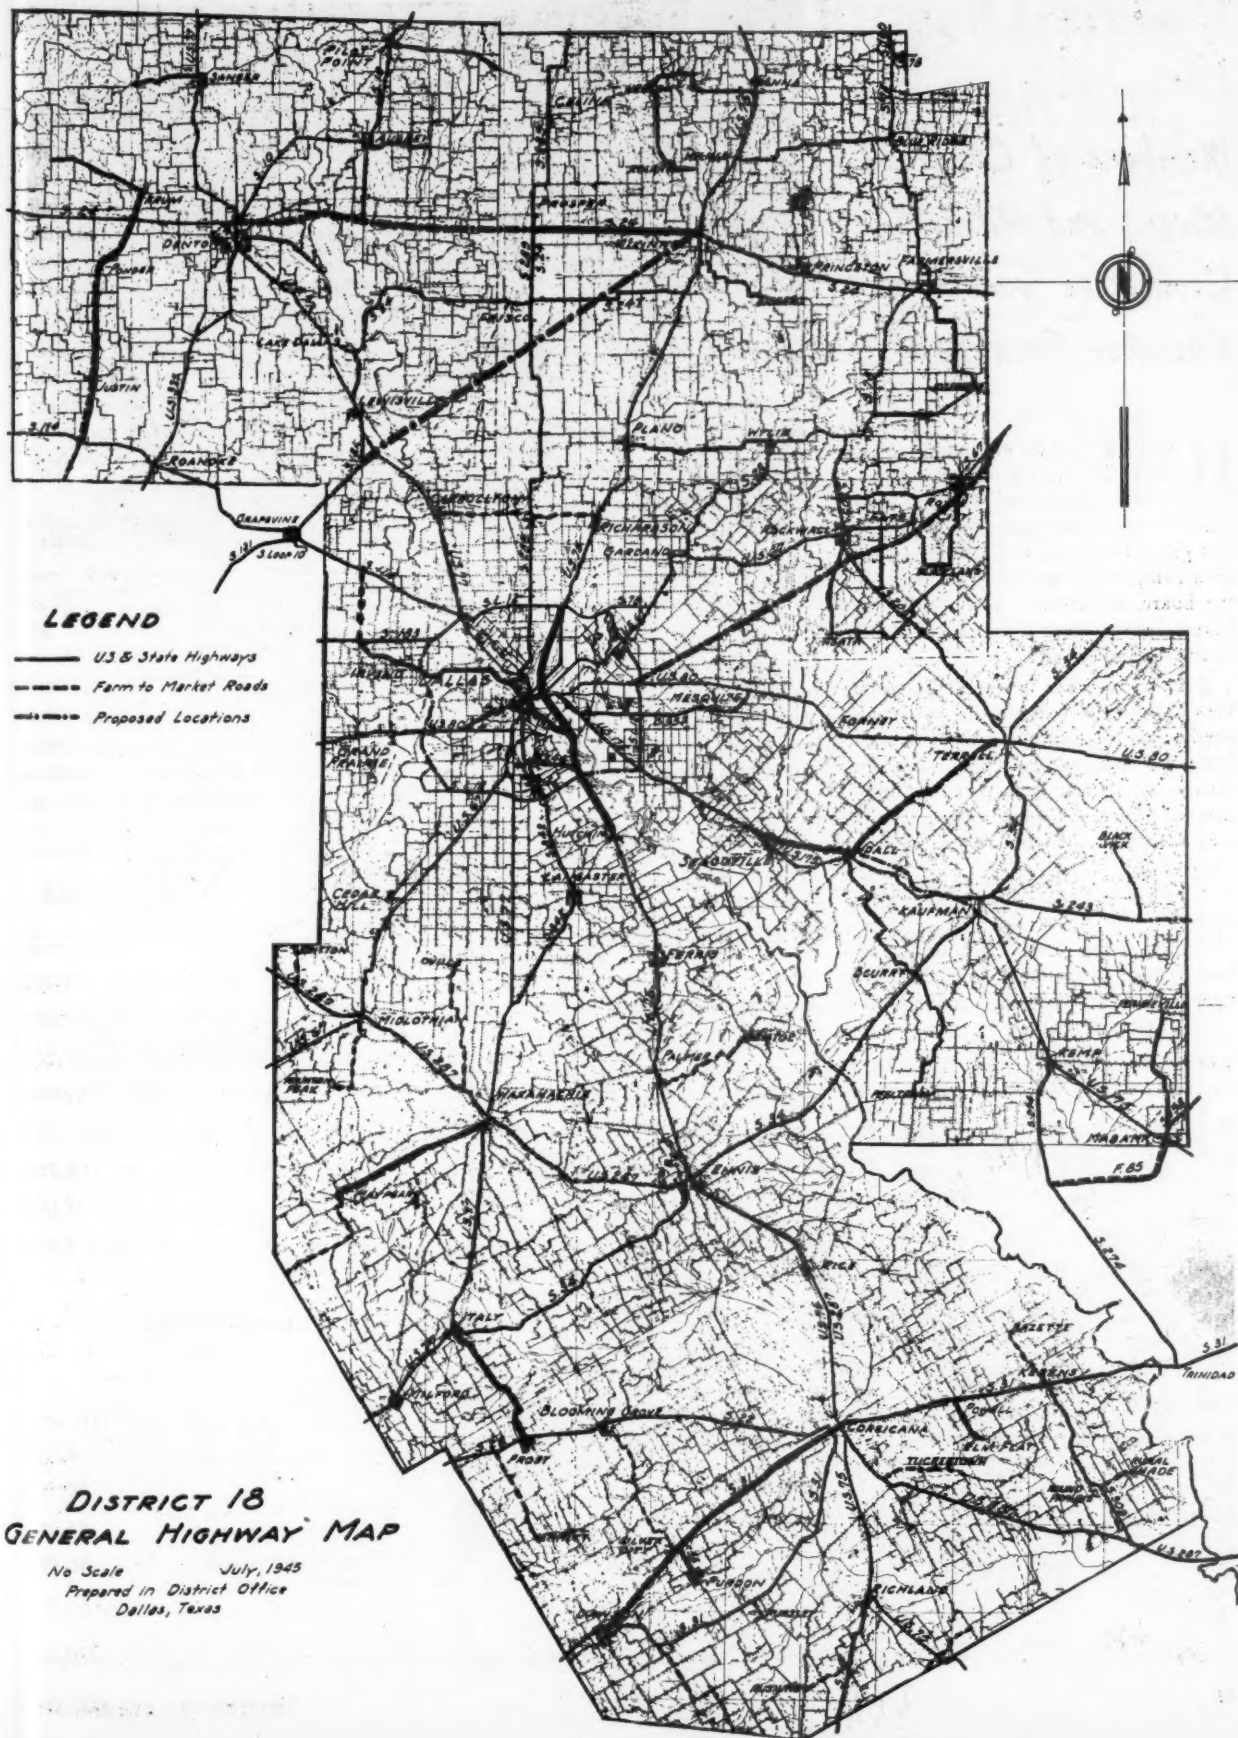

"During the first three years following war's end some $172,500,000 worth of construction will be inaugurated in Texas with Federal and state funds. Projects for the first year under this program approximate $57,500,000. These funds include a total of $28,500,000 for Federal aid roads, $20,000,000 for farm roads and $9,000,000 for urban highway routes for the entire state with like amounts to be allotted for each of the second and third post-war years."

Members of Congress Rivers and Harbors Committee Guests at Chamber Breakfast

HIGHSPOT of an eight-day tour of Texas by members of the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the United States Congress last month was a breakfast given the visiting Congressmen and an accompanying group of engineers by the board of directors and the Trinity River Development Committee of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce.

Coming to Texas to get a panoramic view of the state's waterways and to study needs, they traveled along the Gulf coast from the Sabine to the Rio Grande and then came north to envision the development of the Trinity River into a commercial water link with the major ports of the world.

At the breakfast table in the Texas Room of the Baker Hotel, the veteran chairman of the committee from Columbus, Texas, Congressman J. J. Mansfield, who headed the delegation, said that the canalization of the Trinity River would become a reality.

The view of Chairman Mansfield, who has headed the Rivers and Harbors Committee for fourteen of the twenty-eight years he has served in Congress, was shared by the other committeemen in the party. They included Congressman Hugh Peterson of Georgia, chairman of the subcommittee on beach erosion; and Congressmen Frank W. Boykin of Alabama, Henry D. Larcade, Jr., of Louisiana, James P. Geelan of Connecticut, and William C. Cole of Missouri.

The guests of honor also included Brigadier General John J. Kingman, senior member of the United States Board of Engineers and senior member of the beach erosion board; Brigadier General E. H. Marks, Southwestern division engineer at Dallas; Colonel D. W. Griffiths, district engineer at Galveston; H. R. Norman, member of the staff of the district engineer office at Galveston; and Henry N. Muller, member of the staff of the Board of Engineers.

The visitors were presented by Dale Miller, Washington representative of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce and son of Roy Miller, president of the Intracoastal Canal Association of Texas and Louisiana.

Chairman John W. Carpenter of the Chamber's Trinity River Development Committee, who presided, praised the record of the Army engineers both before and during the war and, in emphasizing the importance of the corps of engineers to the country's development, decried the tendency in some quarters to delegate to other groups or bureaus authority which rightfully belongs to the engineers.

Welcoming the group to Dallas, Mayor Woodall Rodgers lauded the efforts of the congressmen and engineers toward development of the country's waterways and also paid tribute, for their work in behalf of the Trinity River program, to Mr. Carpenter, and his committee; John M. Fouts, manager of the Trinity River Improvement Association; and Dale Miller.

War Chest Moves Into New Home

THE War Chest of Dallas County has moved into its new home, the Community Chest Center, Akard and Young, a gift to the people of Dallas from the family of Mrs. Jennie Schepps and the late Joseph Schepps.

With a frontage of seventy-five feet on Akard and seventy-three and one-half feet on Young, the remodeled, two-story building houses the year-round administration and campaign headquarters of the Chest on the second floor, and the Council of Social Agencies on the first floor, including the Council's divisions—man Mansfield, Representative Peterson said that America had been pushed to the forefront in world commerce and that it is essential to progress that with the coming of peace the nation's merchant ships follow in the wake of the war fleet to all the great ports of the world.

"Too long have we neglected our inland waterways, which are the foundation of such commerce," he said.

Roy Miller said that in coming to Dallas the delegation had arrived at the center of the most important uncompleted waterway in the Southwest.

Lieut. General Walton H. Walker, commanding general of the Eighth Service Command, also joined in welcoming the waterways delegation to Dallas.

Volunteer Service Bureau, research department and social service exchange.

The new home provides 10,000 square feet of floor space for the two organizations, as against a total of 4,000 square feet for their previous separate locations. D. A. Hulcy, War Chest president, said that the two agencies will benefit greatly by being located together and that the efficiency and economy of operation for both will be greatly facilitated by the ownership of their own quarters.

The building was given by Julius Schepps, George Schepps, Mrs. Carl Metzger, formerly Rebecca Schepps, and their children last summer. It will be used for the purpose designated as long as the Chest and Council exist in the community. If at some future time larger quarters become necessary the building can be sold and the funds used for another structure which will still be considered a gift of the Schepps family. If the Community Chest Center ceases to be used for the original purpose, it will be transferred to the Dallas Foundation to be used as its board of directors sees fit.

Julius Schepps said it was the desire of the family to commemorate the civic philanthropies carried on by Joseph Schepps until the time of his death in 1922 and the welfare charities aided by 73-year-old Mrs. Jennie Schepps, who lives at 2834 South Boulevard.

Grayson Gill, architect, and William C. Henger of the Henger Construction Company, contractor for remodeling the twenty-five-year-old building, obtained some of the supplies at cost and donated their personal services.

The site was once part of a land grant in Nacogdoches County before the creation of Dallas County and was valued at a dollar an acre. It later sold for $500 in a sheriff's auction, and is now valued at $20,000. This early history of the site was revealed when Henry Miller, consultant to the Chest building committee, examined the title papers. In addition to Mr. Miller, the building committee in charge of the remodeling included J. B. Adoue, Jr., chairman, and A. D. Hudson, Lawrence S. Pollock, R. R. Gilbert, E. P. Simmons, and Paul Carrington.

Dallas Retailers Ready With V-J Day Closing Plans

DALLAS retail merchants are ready with their V-J Day observance plans.

In contrast with a stay-on-the-job policy agreed on in advance of V-E Day, the stores, anticipating a general holiday celebration the day the news comes that Japan has quit the war, have worked out an uniform closing schedule.

The following plans have been approved by the board of directors of the Dallas Retail Merchants' Association, a division of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce:

If the announcement of the capitulation of Japan comes before noon on any business day, the stores will close within one hour for the remainder of that day, opening for business as usual the following day. If the announcement is made in the morning before opening hours, stores will not open for the day.

If the news comes at or after noon on any business day, stores will close within one hour for the remainder of that day and will remain closed the following day. If the following day is Sunday or a legal holiday, they will open for business as usual on the next business day.

Should the announcement be made at night when the stores are closed, they will remain closed the following day. If the following day is Sunday or a legal holiday, they will open for business as usual on the next business day.

If V-J Day is announced on Sunday or a legal holiday, the stores will remain closed the following day.

Should the President of the United States, however, establish by proclamation a prescribed period for public celebration, then the above plan is to be disregarded and stores will remain closed during the hours fixed for such celebration.

What Others Say --

The Dallas market, known throughout the land for its sun and play clothes, faces the approaching post-war full of enthusiastic and ambitious plans to increase their particular field's importance to the rest of the country.

Dallas Manufacturers' and Wholesalers' Association, a department of the city's Chamber of Commerce, has grown to a point where it represents very big business to the Southwest and is now being reorganized and incorporated under a new charter which will give it greater freedom and impetus to move ahead into plans for a post-war expansion of its sphere of action.

Once released from the necessity of devoting all their strength and ingenuity to the war effort, producers large and small in major and minor markets, have but one place to go—and that is forward.

$7,000,000 City-County Hospital Program Endorsed by Chamber

FULL endorsement of the proposed new city-county hospital program for Dallas and the $7,000,000 county hospital bond issue which will provide the funds for the project was voted by directors of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce July 20 jointly with members of the board of the Dallas Citizens' Council.

Coincident with giving their unanimous approval to the hospital, the two groups of directors recommended that it be built and appropriately named as a memorial to the veterans of World War II.

The Southwestern Medical Foundation, for whose Southwest Medical College the new hospital on Hines Boulevard would be a centerpiece, is also urging Dallas County voters to support the current $7,000,000 county hospital bond issue which is scheduled to be submitted for election August 25.

It is planned that the new city-county hospital replace Parkland, which is considered outmoded and inadequate for present as well as future demands. While a new structure, designed for housing the most modern equipment, is needed, it is proposed that Parkland Hospital not be abandoned but be devoted to other essential uses.

In voting the $7,000,000 bonds to make possible the new hospital as a nucleus for a great medical center in Dallas, the people of Dallas County will help to accelerate the plans of the Southwestern Medical Foundation for the development of the Southwestern Medical College, it was pointed out by Dr. E. H. Cary, Foundation president.

"This bond issue is typical of the revived spirit that is flowing through the civic life of Dallas these days, when there is under way so much planning and effort to make this a greater and better community for the years ahead," he said.

Dallas County already owns the land on which the proposed hospital units are to be erected and adjacent to which the Southwestern Medical Foundation is planning the building of the medical school. A mile-long site fronting on Harry Hines Boulevard, from the present site of Woodlawn Hospital to Inwood Road, will be used.

Dr. Christopher G. Parnall, Rochester, N. Y., hospital consultant, has been engaged to draw the plan that will guide the long-range development of the medical center. His preliminary report touches every detail of education, research, hospital care, out-patient work, recreation, housing construction and maintenance.

Suggested buildings for centering on the new hospital project are a medical school, clinical building, dental school, school of public health, institute for research, general hospital, out-patient care building, chronic and convalescent hospital, tuberculosis hospital, psychopathic hospital, cancer hospital, Negro hospital, dormitories for students, houses for faculty and staff, laundry and power plant and club houses.

SMALL BUSINESSES FACE

An Opportunity... and a Responsibility

When Victory makes possible the lifting of necessary restrictions, it is the small businesses which can resume normal operations quickest.

This will be their opportunity. Along with the opportunity is a responsibility . . . responsibility for creating jobs. There cannot be one without the other. The so-called small businesses always have, and always will give employment to the greatest aggregate number of people.

While business men have been making postwar plans for their own enterprises, we have been making plans for postwar banking service that will be of greatest assistance.

Business men are invited to discuss their present and their postwar plans with us . . . they will find here a broad understanding of business, sound encouragement and a banking service that is dependable and cooperative.

Republic National Bank Boosts Capital And Surplus to Total of $20,000,000

An increase of $5,000,000 in the capital and surplus of the Republic National Bank of Dallas, voted by directors and ratified at a special meeting of shareholders, will give the bank the largest loan limit of any bank south of Chicago, west of Pittsburgh and east of Los Angeles. The action raised the capital from $7,500,000 to $10,000,000 and surplus from $7,500,000 to $10,000,000, to a total of $20,000,000.

The increase will be effected by the issuance at $40 per share of 125,000 shares in addition to the 375,000 shares of stock outstanding. It is the third increase made by the bank in capital structure within the last fifteen months.

With Federal banking regulations limiting loans to any one interest to 10 per cent of combined capital and surplus, the capital boost will enable the bank to finance single loans of up to $2,000,000, it was pointed out by Fred F. Florence, president. Anticipation of tremendous expansion in the Southwest after the war prompted the action, Mr. Florence said.

and polished effects, Carl Randall's dancing chorus has contributed materially to the high quality of this year's operettas.

The ten-week schedule got off to a magnificent start with the presentation of The Great Waltz, which broke all box-office records in the Casino's history. The Casino thus far has also presented familiar favorites such as Blossom Time, the Student Prince and Countess Maritza; has delved into comic opera with a splendid presentation of Martha; and has introduced locally an operettic rendition of the French classic, Cyrano, with Metropolitan Baritone John Brownlee singing the lead opposite Marthe Errolle.

One night of the Blossom Time run was lost to rain, and, with Cyrano rained out for two nights, many patrons were unable to see one of the most delightful productions the Casino has presented. However, weather permitting, the season should turn out to be one of the Casino's most successful. It seems to have as near to everything desirable as the State Fair Association has thus far assembled — leading artists, accomplished directors and designers and a well-chosen repertoire.

C. L. Quaintance and Company Opens New Branch in Dallas

To serve merchants of the Southwest, the Dallas offices and show room of C. L. Quaintance and Company of Chicago, exponents of the Quaintance plan of merchandising, have been opened in remodeled ground floor quarters at 1105 Commerce Street.

The Dallas branch, handling nationally known lines of women's wear and accessories, is under the management of Victor H. Mertz, formerly connected with a chain of home-owned dry goods stores.

The Dallas show room is the third to be opened by the Quaintance company under the direction of C. L. Quaintance, president, who instituted the plan of assembling outstanding manufacturers' lines in one show room in strategic market centers of the nation as a convenience to retailers and buyers.

"This method makes the showing of manufacturers' complete lines available to buyers within a relatively short travel time, adding to convenience and economy in buying," Mr. Mertz said.

The first of the Quaintance show rooms was set up in the Merchandise Mart in

Dallas Life Agency Cashiers Bidding For National Association Headquarters

Seeking to keep the national headquarters of the Life Agency Cashiers' Association of the United States in Texas for the third consecutive year, the Dallas Life Insurance Cashiers' Club has moved to second place in the number of points on which the central office is won.

The national headquarters is awarded each year to the city winning the most trophy points, and for the past two years has been located in Texas, having been won by the Houston cashiers in 1943 and by the San Antonio club in 1944. Holding first place currently for the 1945 designation is the combined club of Detroit and Windsor, Canada.

The Dallas club has been instrumental this year in organizing two new clubs, one in Austin and the other in Fort Worth, it is announced by Joe Wyatt, Great National Life Insurance Company. Texas leads the nation with five clubs, no other state having more than two associations.

Award as the best play of the year and which is now showing to houses sold out weeks in advance.

The Rockefeller Foundation, believing that good theater entertainment should be made available to people outside of New York, granted a Fellowship a year ago to Miss Jones to pursue her plan for the creation of a permanent repertory theater in the Southwest.

Many cities were eager to obtain the enterprise but Dallas was chosen as the most cosmopolitan city and the freshest cultural center between New York and San Francisco. Already a city that loves good entertainment, and located in the middle of the U. S., Dallas was considered by Miss Jones and the Rockefeller Foundation as an ideal cradle for a new venture that may spread throughout the country.

The existence of such a theater in Dallas has great civic significance. It will attract visitors from Dallas' trade territory to its productions. New residents moving into the Southwest are influenced in their choice of location by the cultural and educational advantages each city can offer.

Distinguished theatrical entertainment the year round will be an asset which only Dallas can boast.

Thus, Theater '45 will be "good business" for Dallas. It will continue materially to increase Dallas' prestige and play a vital part in maintaining Dallas' status as the leader in Southwestern culture.

For those who question the advisability of launching such an enterprise in war-time, it is pointed out that England's repertory companies have continued operations and have prospered throughout the blitz.

The project will be governed by a board of trustees of forty-eight community leaders. It is emphasized that this is a professional theater, operating on Equity scale. Its supporters and trustees, however, comprise a civic, non-profit organization dedicated to the best entertainment in theatrical art and with a status comparable to the Dallas Art Association, the Dallas Grand Opera Association and other cultural groups.

Dallas will have a rare asset in Theater '45. It is necessary that the project be soundly financed and budgeted. Only by the cooperation of civic-minded and art-loving citizens willing to contribute toward its foundation can such a theater come into being.

The board of trustees is raising a fund to establish this theater, finance the remodeling of the playhouse, underwrite the expense of getting into production, pay salaries during rehearsals and other necessary initial costs.

For what this project means to Dallas, the generous support of every business man and industrial firm in the city is earnestly invited. Your gift will be an investment in the prestige and civic advancement of Dallas. Contributions are deductible from income tax returns.

Editor's Note—A community campaign to underwrite initial operations of Theater '45 will be conducted in August. Mr. McDermott, who is president of the board of trustees, and Mrs. McDermott have contributed $10,000 personally.

Army Air Forces Staff Busy With Plant Clearance Work

THE current readjustment program on war contracts, described as "the second biggest job in America," is meaning busy days and nights for Army Air Forces personnel assigned to plant clearance work.

The Government has a tremendous responsibility in settling war contractors' claims as quickly as possible as an aid to increased production of new war machinery dictated by changing battle conditions and requirements for the all-out effort against Japan, points out Brig. Gen. Ray G. Harris, commanding general of the Midwestern District of Air Technical Service Command, which includes Dallas.

Partial termination of some contracts is planned and conversion to civilian production is on the way wherever possible, he said, explaining that the nation's entire economy for decades to come depends on the outcome of the readjustment program. Realizing the tremendous importance of this problem, the Readjustment Division of the Air Technical Service Command was created to work with labor, management and Government, he explained.

Emphasis is being placed on the assignment of carefully trained specialists to the plant clearance section in recognition of the importance of rapid plant clearance and property disposal in contract adjustment, he reported.

"The Government knows that a war manufacturer can't start on a revised war contract until his house is in order," pointed out General Harris. "Neither can the same manufacturer go back to making washing machines again until the washing machine machinery is running. So on the Army team that has worked with the contractor on this change is an officer whose job is plant clearance and property disposal. His duty is to get the bombsight machinery and spare parts out of the factory as soon as possible, so business can start rolling on either new war gadgets or washing machines. The Government intends to clear all Government-owned property in private plants sixty days after the contractor has filed an acceptable inventory."

Referring specifically to surplus property disposal, General Harris said that it would be necessary to scrap a large percentage of war equipment that is declared surplus.

"War is a mighty wasteful business," he said. "A Sperry ball turret just won't fit the post-war motor car and we can't take Junior to school in one slightly used P-51. We don't want the situation occurring after this war, as it has done after others, where outmoded material will be warehoused and kept for years at great expense to the taxpayer. Surely, it is sound business to recognize junk as junk and handle it accordingly. Nothing will be scrapped that can be used nor any parts that can be saved economically. But there, indeed, is little to be gained by spending $10 in labor to salvage a spare part worth $1.50.

"Sound economists agree it's smart to get the surplus material out of the way, use the useful parts where possible and reasonable, and clear the decks. The property has served its purpose, saved the lives of many of our boys, and helped win the war."

Senate supporter of the FEPC has already served notice that a cloture vote will be demanded if a filibuster materializes, which it certainly will. Whether or not the two-thirds majority could be obtained, it is obvious that FEPC opponents are better off if the opportunity is not permitted to arise.

Consequently, whatever may be said against the temporary FEPC—and a very great deal can be said against that iniquitous agency—it is probable that Southern Democrats were prudently correct in perceiving that discretion is frequently the better part of valor. They succeeded in reducing by half the appropriations granted the agency, and they succeeded in out-manoeuvring supporters of the permanent FEPC bill. The danger with respect to the latter is by no means past, of course; a bitter political struggle can be expected in the months ahead. But in effectuating the recent compromise the Southern opponents of the FEPC took at least the lesser of two evils, and they may have accomplished something more. They may have lost a battle, but they may have won a war.

In-Plant Feeding Is OUR Business . . .

Proper in-plant feeding pays dividends in personnel health and well-being, but it is a phase of modern industry entirely foreign to a management that is more concerned with problems of production and distribution. With reconversion and postwar operation immediately at hand, forward-thinking executives appreciate the value of being relieved of the burden of a cafeteria operation in addition to their own business. At the present we are serving eight of the largest industries in the Southwest and we have the facilities for the immediate addition of several more. Our successful record is proof of our qualifications for handling your in-plant feeding also. Write us for detailed information and a call from a representative.
